

INAUGURATION OF THE ORLEANS CITY RAILROAD—The first trip over the Orleans City Railroad was made the occasion of a pleasant excursion yesterday.

About 6 o'clock P. M. the officers of the road—President, George Clark; Secretary, Jules Bonit; Directors, G. W. Hynson, D. B. Macarthy, B. Saloy, Joseph Hernandez, L. E. Lemarie and Francis Mouney—together with a large number of stockholders and invited guests, proceeded from opposite the office of the company, on Dauphine street, in two of the bright, new and elegant cars provided for the occasion, to travel over the length of the road and make as thorough an inspection of the same as circumstances would admit.

The route of the road is down Dauphine to Dumaine, out Dumaine to Broad, down Broad and beneath the overhauling branches of the trees that line this street, to Laharpe, and down Laharpe to the terminus of the road, where the spacious though as yet incomplete stables, etc., of the company are situate.

The depot is located on two squares of ground situate at the head of Bayou Sauvage, and near the Gentilly Road.

Though the buildings have not been completed, the stables will be ready to afford shelter to the animals by to-morrow, when twelve cars will be placed upon the line.

Returning to the city the route passes down Grand Route St. John, up Dumaine street to Broad, and thence by St. Peter and Basin streets to Canal.

After the excursion there was a very delightful collation spread at the office of the company, at which the greatest good feeling prevailed, and many toasts were drunk to the success of the road, etc.
